[Communicated.] Removal of the Penitentiary. A writer in the Richmond Dispatch, in apeaking of the removal of the penitentiary from the city (which now all agree should be done), suggests the historic site of "Drewry's Bluff" as a good location, and we second the motion, for no place could be found possessing all the advantages of this site, being near the city, and so accessible by river, railroad, and turnpike. The present penitentiary, in the midst of what will soon be a crowded city, is a great eyesore, and damaging to all the property around it, for it stops all improvements in what but for that would now be one of the handsomes portions of the city. When first built on the western suburbs it was the universal opinion that the city would grow east and beyond Rocketts, but "Westward the course of empire took its way," and now big Richmond is surrounding the buildings, and demands their removal to some more suitable location. Let the Metropolitan press speak out on the subject, and demand the removal of this excrescence at once. -- Fredericks.

ROXBORO', PERSON COUNTY, N. C., ? March 5th, 1874. Editors of the Dispatch:

Please inform Mr. W. B. Beach, of Prince Edward, through your columns, that my miller, Mr. T. Wilbon, killed one hog last season, eighteen months old, weighing 321 weighing 350 pounds upon an average. A SUBSCRIBER.

FIRELESS LOCOMOTIVES .- The Chicago Times says of the fireless locomotives running on some of the streets of the Garden "It consists of a boiler, eight feet long by three feet in diameter, and the usual machinery on a small scale. There was no fuel, no fire, no fireman. The steam was supplied for the round trip of six miles before starting. At the depôt was a supply boiler, sixteen feet by three feet, in which steam was generated until 200 pounds pressure was indicated by the steam-gauge. The locomotive boiler was three-fourths full of cold water. Instead of boiling this by means of a fire, and raising the pressure to a required height, the steam was introduced from the supply-boiler through an iron tube. The iron tube was connected with the locomotive-boiler, the latter running under the water, along the bottom of the boiler, and letting out the steam as it was freed from the supply-boiler into the locomotive-boiler. This steam, rising through the cold water, permeated it, and quickly raised its pressure to 170 pounds. With this supply of steam the locomotive started, drawing a heavy four-horse car over three miles to Thirty-fifth street in ten minutes. The amount of steam consumed represented CORN AND FLOUR EXCHANGE eighty pounds pressure, locomotive starting back with ninety pounds remaining. When the starting point was reached there were fifty-seven pounds of steam in the boiler, the pressure being reduced only thirty-three OATS. pounds in the return trip, which was a down grade. It must be borne in mind that there was a large car, heavily laden, making eighteen miles per hour. The experiment proved conclusively that as a substitute for dummy engines the fireless locomotive is, beyond question, a success."

The New York correspondent of a San Francisco paper, speaking of Miss Kellogg's recent performances in the former city, says: She sings as well as, if not better, than ever; WHEAT.Red ... but she is growing too stout for grace or beauty. The innkeepers at the various provincial towns where they stop lay it to the onion soups her mother makes for her; and while they do not deny that they may be appetizing and conducive to embonpoint, it is CORN.-White.....248 said, for some reason or other, they object to them. Madame Kellogg has the genius of a Soyer. She can broil a herring or the caudal extremity of a Cincinnati porker over the grate-fire of a private parlor in such a way as to render herself invisible for the smoke and to make one's eyes and one's mouth water at the same time-at least, such is her reported ability.

We slew a man yesterday, says the Atlanta (Ga.) Herald, for contending that the magnificent picture of Lookout mountain in yesterday's Constitution was a sketch of Castleberry's Hill with the barracks in the foreground. Blood is nothing to us, where the honor of journalism is concerned. The most casual observer, by reading the words "Lookout mountain," neatly printed at the bottom of the picture, could have discovered at a glance what the graphic mole-hill was intended for. Thus it is, however. There are wretches who scoff at all our efforts to elevate the profession of printing. A St. Louis man went to New Orleans to participate in the carnival, and while in that city he visited the legislative assembly to see the colored lawmakers. He saw a stalwart negro arke to make a speech, holding a large piece of pie in his left hand. As the orator proceeded he would take an occasional bite from the pie, and then continue his remarks.

The spectacle of the legislative pie-biter so amused the visitor that he laughed loud and immoderately, so as to attract the attention of the assembly. The pie-eating statesman was highly offended, and demanded that the blonde should be ejected. The request was about to be complied with, when an acquaintance of the St. Louisian interfered and saved him from being turned out. Bret Harte has found a French translator. There must be a wonderful fund of humor left in his poems when they appear in a foreign tongue. The wild western idosyncracies of speech, when done in French, must be excruciating funny to the litterateurs of the continent.

The published plan of the western scientist for producing rain is to "elevate a copper wire by a balloon, or other means, until its upper end reaches the clouds," hitch the lower end to a railroad track, and send up currents of electricity. All a farmer has to do for a safeguard against drought is to buy a balloon, three or four miles of copper wire, a battery, a railroad, and some gas-works.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The market for cotton on the spot has been very unsettled and irregular. Business for the most part has been mostly for export and speculation. During the early part of the week there was little doing, and values were more or less nominal. Wednesday and Thursday there was more demand, and with favorable news from Liverpool prices advanced one-half cent. and values have been sustained, though dealings were chiefly speculative. Contracts have been in good demand but irregular, and curing the middle of the week prices advanced materially. March is showing the greatest improvement. Total sailes of the week were 143.318 cales, of which 131,150 were contract and 12,168 for immediate delivery—as follows: 6,580 for export, 2,008 for spinning, 3,347 for speculation, 233 in transit; included were 1,934 to arrive.
